Redflex Consortium Wins $100 million Contract to deliver the Ireland Safety Camera Program

23 November 2009

The directors of Redflex Holdings Limited are pleased to announce that the GoSafe Consortium has signed a contract with the Government of Ireland to provide a Safety Camera Program for 5 years. Redflex Holdings is a 16% shareholder in the GoSafe Consortium, along with Irish company Spectra and French company EGIS Projects SA.

The contract, valued at over $100 million, is to provide a fully outsourced Safety Camera Program for the whole of the country. GoSafe will be headquartered in Listowel, County Kerry, on the West coast of Ireland. Initially, GoSafe will operate a fleet of mobile safety camera cars utilising Redflex mobile camera systems. To enforce speed limits throughout the country, GoSafe will operate from 15 strategically located depots.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform, Mr. Dermot Ahern said "What this project is all about is saving lives and preventing injuries."

Garda Commissioner Fachtna Murphy said "Inappropriate speed is the single greatest contributory factor in road deaths and serious injuries. In recent years we have worked to identify those roads which have the greatest propensity for speed related collisions and this is where we direct our enforcement activity. The signing of this contract today enables us to supplement existing enforcement and ensure the deployment of enforcement technology to even more areas where it can have even greater impact".

Redflex will provide our state of the art Image and Infringement Processing System, (IIPS). The system efficiently processes large volumes of infringements and caters for flexible business requirements. The workflow engine presents offences for verification and the document management system links correspondence to the offence data.

"Ireland caps off a series of strategic wins for Redflex. We are pleased to be providing outsourced Safety Camera Programs around the world", said Ricardo Fiusco, General Manager of Redflex Traffic Systems Pty Ltd.
